
Christine W. McEntee, Executive Vice President/CEO

Executive Vice President/CEO Christine McEntee has been with AIA since February 2006. She has over 25 years of association management experience with a track record of leading organizations to grow and deliver positive member results. Chris holds a master's degree in health administration from the George Washington University and a bachelor's degree in nursing from Georgetown University. A graduate of the Advanced Executive Program at the Kellogg School of Management at Northwestern University, she has served the board of directors of the American Society of Association Executives and the Edmund Burke School. Currently, she serves as the public member of the American Board of Ophthalmology and on the board of the Medstar Research Institute. Chris is a guest lecturer at Georgetown University School of Business. In 1994 she was featured in Chicago Business/Crain's List as an Under 40 Mover and Shaker. She received the Greater Washington Society of Association Executives (GWSAE) Executive Update's Smart CEO award and she served as a GWSAE visionary in 2002. In 2007 she was named a Fellow of the American Society of Association Executives.

Chris's previous positions include chief executive officer of the American College of Cardiology, executive vice president at the American Hospital Association, and legislative representative for the American Association of Retired Persons.

She is married with two adult sons and enjoys jogging, biking, skiing, travel, and leisurely dinners with family and friends.