

THE GALA

After the completion of the monumental Artemis bronzes both of them are going to be moved to a location in Athens for a fair-well gala. In this gala global dignitaries will be invited and international press is going cover the event. The sculptures will be together for a last time. There off, they are separated and taken to their location in their new homeland, Mykonos and New York.

Mykonos is the Hellenic island adjacent to the island of Delos the birthplace of the Goddess Artemis and the ancient Mediterranean-trading metropolis while New York is the modern counterpart of Delos in terms of global trading.

The two cities will each have one monumental Goddess Artemis rising from the top of the world as a symbol to women's rising strength on the world.

The Gala is going to be a celebration with emotional undertone dew to the sculptures separation o fallow.

The sculptures separation will bring the women of the world together with this symbol of pride and power that Artemis represents, a power that incorporates determination, strength and pride, forces that help the world to be complete.
